DRAG

FEMALE
IMPERSONATION
ON THE STAGE

For the first time the complexities of this extraordinary branch of theatrical technique are fully explored in Roger Baker's serious and absorbing work. Can the pantomime dame be traced back to the medieval mystery plays? How was Shakespeare's first Juliet—a smooth-faced boy—expected to behave? What happened when the first woman appeared on the English stage? Why did America take to drag in such a big way? What is the relationship between female impersonation and homosexuality? Where do compulsive transvestites fit into the scheme of things? How do glamorous impersonators shape themselves like women? What is the relevance of drugs and hormone injections?

All these, and many more questions are answered as the reader makes his way through a glittering gallery of heroines, strippers, tragic women, dames, comic figures and sopranos—all of whom are MEN.

DRAG

It has come to our attention that DRAG magazine is being called and thought of as a magazine about the homosexual transvestite. Because of this trend of thought we feel that we should advise our readers why we chose to use the title, DRAG.

Drag, being an ambiguous word, can apply to both the heterosexual tv and the homosexual tv. The term was originally used to describe the clothing or costumes worn by actors during Elizabethan times when men played the feminine roles in theatrical productions. They were not historical costumes of the times but were the fashions of the times that the play was presented, whether or not the play took place in ancient Greece or Africa. The most popular gowns used were those with a long train which 'dragged' across the stage. As a result of this 'dragging' across the stage the costume became known as drag.

We changed the original title of our magazine from DRAG QUEENS to just DRAG because it was misleading our readers to believe it was exclusively a magazine about the homosexual transvestite. Not so! The new title does not have any sexual implications so the heterosexual tv should not be afraid to read our publication. (We do hope our readers are magnanimous enough or grown up enough to accept the many divisions of the transvestite world whether they are part of a particular division or not.)

Incidentally, over 95% of our readers-subscribers are from the heterosexual persuasion. We are a magazine ABOUT THE TRANSVESTITE be they gay, straight, or just plain confused!

NEWS

NEW JERSEY: At the present time, hairdressers are allowed to cut only women's hair. Barbers may cut the hair of women or men, but are forbidden to shampoo, set, color or otherwise treat women's hair.

Recently, Secretary of State John P. Lomenzo held a public hearing to consider doing away with the present requirement of separate licenses for barber shops and beauty salons and separate licenses for barbers and cosmetologists and replace them with a single license.

ABC NEWSCAST in New York reported that two guys in drag were accepted into the girl scouts in some southern town according to one of our alert subscribers.

UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA: Michael Proust, 25 was the overwhelming victor according to San Francisco's publication, VECTOR. He was crowned homecoming queen during the half-time to the cheering throng. It seems that he beat out five lovely coeds for the Alumni Day title of Homecoming Queen.

AMERICAN INTERNATIONAL pictures is planning on releasing in April, DR. JEKYLL AND SISTER HYDE. The plot of this particular movie is the story of a man who discovers a drug that temporarily transforms him into his own sister! The film will star Ralph Bates, Martine Beswick, Gerald Sim and Lewis Fiander, and Roy Ward Baker will direct.

SANTA ANA, CALIF: A woman sued her husband for $1.5 million because she says he changed his sex without her consent.

The Superior court suit filed by Doris J. Burnell of Placentia, said the sex operation shocked her "ideals of decency and propriety" and made her "ill, excited and nervous."

Mrs. Burnell named as defendants Maurice Burnell and his physician, Dr. Royle J. Catazoni of Hollywood. She said Catazoni performed surgery changing her husband's sex from male to female despite her objections that this violated the couple's marriage contract.

Mrs. Burnell said she also filed suit to dissolve her seven-year marriage.

NOW WE KNOW THE MONETARY VALUE OF A PENIS!

LEXINGTON, K.Y. In a morality move the local police cracked down on four women go-go dancers. Later at the station, they discovered that the women were female impersonators. They were rebooked for 'wearing disguises.'

MISSION-IMPOSSIBLE: This popular television program recently had a sequence in which Phelps, played by Peter Graves, is accused of being gay. His response to this accusation was: "Don't equate my interests in intellectual pursuits with a lack of masculinity."

PHILADELPHIA: Margaret Mead, famed anthropologist, addressed the Association for the Advancement of Science here and proclaimed men can do anything a woman can do...except have babies. She said that we are in a sexual revolution, where the 'roles' men and women once played are disappearing.....

LONDON: Read recently that the English insurance firm, Lloyds of London, has put up, $1,000,000 (one million $$) for the first man to have a baby. Don't know how valid this is.....

MIAMI: "Police chief Garmire wears panty-hose," a young police officer allegedly said at a city employees party here and he was promptly relieved from duty. Sargeant Marion Murrah says he was not at the party and that it was his twin brother who attended. The local gay population is amused at the 'pantyhose' charge as the chief is one of the most oppressive police departments in the country.

Queens Liberation Front's Lee G. Brewster has commented, "In the event that such accusations are true he doesn't get any sympathy from me. Anyone who is so ready to enforce vice charges and is a tv or a homosexual himself should receive the highest penalty that can be awarded for such bigotry!"

SAN FRANCISCO: Thousands of people in the gay community who have enjoyed the great humor of "Michele" will be able to enjoy him again in the coming "HELLO DOLLY" production at the SOCIETY FOR INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS community center. A talented group of S.I.R. Productions will assist Michelle in his starring role. The board of directors has allotted $4,000 for the "DOLLY" show, anticipating the crowds that have made S.I.R. productions a financial success. Profit from the "Dolly" show is placed in the S.I.R. bank account and is used to help operate the organization throughout the year. Wonder how much of this is used to forward the rights of the homosexual trans-vestite..the drag queen. San Francisco's Tavern Guild won't allow female impersonators in the gay bars unless they are escorted.

PREJUDICE??? EXPLOITATION? You decide.

CAROL BURNETTE shows are resembling gay bar entertainment. On one of Carol's segments one of her regulars was in drag and acted sadistically toward Paul Lynde. Lynde played a person who gets his kicks from feeling pain. Meanwhile, Dean Martin guested Eddie Albert and Jonathan Winters and all had to get in drag....

HOLLYWOOD: One of the gay magazines out of California reports that Liza Minelli has been tagged a 'fruit-fly' by her entertainment buddy. She almost engulfed Alan Sues with attention on a recent "Laugh-In" and travels about with her friend, Jim Bailey, as he does drag impressions of entertainers". Mr. Bailey swears he is an actor.

MR. JIM BAILEY: appeared at Carnegie hall on Feb 5th to a standing room only audience. The audience, being mostly gay became quite upset when a comic on the bill started telling anti-gay liberation jokes. The homosexuals threatened QUITE noisily that if the act wasn't taken off the stage they would come up and throw him off! Mr. Bailey appeared quite obviously shaken by what happened when he came on to meet the hostile audience. He was well received though.

ACROSS TOWN on the same evening, Lee Brewsters 4th annual Mardi Gras Ball was underway playing to a record breaking turnout. Over 1,500 (one thousand five hundred) people attended making it the largest drag ball in the country. The floor show consisted of the top female impersonators in the country, most of which were stars of the world renowned JEWEL BOX REVUE. Mr. Chris Moore and ROBIN Rogers headlined the show. Three newspapers reviewed the show. One

SHOW US THAT GARTER BELT LIZ!

Drag magazine is proud to have been able to cover and photograph New York's first drag wedding. The bride, Liz Eden, appeared radiant and excited as photographers snapped photographs of the bride and groom.

Breathtaking in her expensive 'especially made' wedding gown, she had everything a bride could wish for: Something borrowed, something new, something old, something blue...(garter belt).... AND A MAN TO BOOT!

THE WEDDING WAS OFFICIATED BY AN ORDAINED MINISTER.

THE WEDDING PARTY OF NEW YORK'S FIRST DRAG WEDDING.

For her bridesmaids, Liz chose her best friends, Caroline, Ronnie and Suzie.

Along with DRAG representatives, other members of the local press were also present to cover this news worthy event. In addition, the wedding was videotaped for closed circuit television.

Especially touching was the attendance of Liz's mom and dad as well as the mother of the groom.

QUEENS LIBERATION FRONT...

...What is it?

The broad objective of Queens Liberation Front is to gain the legal right for everyone who so desires to crossdress regardless of their sexual orientation or desires. Queens Lib is not a membership organization but more of a foundation that is financed by drag balls, the publication of a magazine, DRAG and by speaking engagements on the phenomenon of cross-dressing. The only contributions accepted by Queens is in the form of time and talent on the part of professional people. To keep in contact with people interested in cross-dressing QLF maintains an international mailing list of over 2,000 individuals and organizations. Also, the voice of QLF or commonly Queens, DRAG magazine reaches 3,500 people across the country.

In its original prospectus Queens Liberation Front, then just known as Queens put forth two goals:

1. RIGHT TO CONGREGATE: In New York the license for a drag ball or rather dance permit stated that men dressed in the female attire were not to be permitted on the premises of said dance.
2. RIGHT TO DRESS AS WE SEE FIT.....
We feel that the wearing of a particular article of clothing doesn't make one a criminal. We hope to get a ruling adopting the law presently used in the state of Hawaii. It has been interpreted to mean that one may wear the clothing of the opposite sex as long as he does not deceive others. If one wears a button stating that one is a male it takes away all criminal aspects of cross-dressing.

On October 31st, 1970 the first anniversary of the organization Executive Director, Lee Brewster presented to the transvestite community QLF's first birthday present...the removal of the discriminatory clause on the dance permit.

Afterwards, during 1970-71, before going to court to set a legal precedent Queens Lib attorneys searched the law books for something else that might be used against the transvestite. The only anti-drag statement the lawyers came up with was one on the Catering and Caberet licenses which stated: " No homosexuals, Lesbians OR PERSONS PRETENDING TO BE were to be allowed on the premises of a licensed establishment. Afraid someone would use that clause against the crossdresser as cause not to allow the tv access to public accomodations, Queens Liberation director, Lee Brewster and her attorneys made another call upon the Bureau of Consumer affairs. Mrs. Susan First, legal representative for the department wanted to know which of the aforementioned groups Mr. Brewster and the lawyers represented. Lee spoke up and said, "the persons pretending to be." After about one hour of debating Queens Lib won again. The clause was removed from the books. A second birthday gift was given to the TV community.

Queens Liberation has been represented on the campuses of the colleges in the North East area of the U.S. Some of the more recent engagements were at Rutgers University, New York University, Patterson State College, Mills College (an all girls school) and Newark State college at Union, N.J. At all the speaking engagements QLF representatives appear in full female attire. To date all the apperances have been very well received. At Patterson State College, Mr. Brewster received such a reception she had to ask them to stop applauding.

✂ UNBELIEVABLE BUT TRUE!!...FIRST TIME IN DRAG ✂

"WOW! I'm prettier than my sister", was the first words the above young transvestite uttered when he saw his transformation from male to female. He had come over to my DRAG CONSULTANT service for help and instruction on the art of female impersonation. He was so nervous he asked, as most do, to forgo the instructions and just make him up. I did and the following pictures are the result.

He is just as sweet and innocent as he appears. The first remarks he made when he came in was, "I hope you don't get mad at me because I have to tell you something." I said no I wouldn't, so what was the problem. He said, "I lied, my name isn't Peter, its....." He won me over as I do not like any one who goes around telling lies. Even little white ones. He later told us his drag name was Judy. I personally, don't understand why he chose another name because his real name is a beautiful one used by both male and female.

This lovely brunette from L.A. was afraid some one would recognize her...but who would ever think this is a boy.....

After the consultation he wrote me and said that before seeing himself

Donna a shy type even went so far as to go out and move her car from the parking lot. She uses her own natural hair....

Judy smiles, obviously pleased at what she sees. One picture is worth a thousand words....Wouldn't you say?

I showed the doctor my cashier's check for $4,000. It may not have impressed him, but seeing this Swiss Bank check with my name on it certainly impressed me, even if it WAS borrowed money. It was the largest sum I had ever amassed at any one time.

The check was made out to Dr. Georges Borou of Casablanca. I had already communicated to him that he could expect my arrival in three weeks for his world renowned sex-reassignment surgery.

My visit to the doctor here in America was on a Thursday evening. I had made the appointment only that afternoon. As I sat at his desk and stated my desires, I showed him the check as an indication of my resolve. This was intended to forestall any cautionary words of advice. (If I had gone this far, would I be likely to heed them?) In addition, assuming the doctor's services are not given out of purely altruistic motives, this slight drain on the national (and local) economy might appear undesirable. I needn't have worried. Later contact with this doctor revealed to me that he is for letting people determine their own destinies, and also that he did not need me. Later in our relationship I told him he was fulfilling the dream of every young medical student: to replace suffering and misery with relief and happiness. I still believe it.

The result of this appointment was another appointment for the following Sunday evening, at which time the first stage of the operation was to be performed: the castration.

With feet in the stirrups, I received a dozen or so needles of novacaine around the base of the scrotum. When this had taken effect, the scrotum was opened and the testicles were removed. There are three tubes or ducts that come from within the body to each of the testicles. It was necessary to pull each of these until they were slightly stretched from within the body, and then to cut and cauterize them. This is the part that hurt, since there was no anesthetic in the body. It was not unbearable. After that the job was done except for closing the wound. The skin of the scrotum was left intact, of course, for later use in constructing the labia.

When I left the office that night, I was given seven darvon tablets to take if any pain should persist. There was very little, and I only took one when I went to bed to help in sleeping. The residual pain was no worse than that of a pulled tooth.

At this point, the reader may wonder how the removal of the testicles affected my sex drive. The answer is that there was absolutely no diminishing of sexual desires. If anything, the day to day knowledge that my dress was less of a disguise and a more natural garb for my body increased my

I want what I want

"It isn't quite like the end of the world-- I mean it isn't quite like stealing or even killing someone...." Usually repelled at the prospect of anyone's sexual lifestyle being equated to stealing or killing, it has always appeared as uncalled for extremism. One abhors the conspiracy of words when linking categories. But somehow, perhaps due to the credit of the film's total delivery in the appeal of someones cry for acceptance, Cinerama's I WANT WHAT I WANT rings loud, clear and true.

From the very beginning one grasps the pain of loneliness and longing. The pain of awkwardness and self ostracism. From the very beginning, one tastes the twilight zone of Roy Clark. Anne Heywood manages to play both sides of the transvestite-transsexual quite well considering she IS a genital female. This reviewer will not cavil with either characterization, for it is the spirit of the role which is paramount. So while perhaps lacking in masculine image of Roy, Miss Heywood more than compensates with the aura of the situation so many American men are apparently awakening to.

The story progresses quite matter of fact like in showing the usual behavior pattern inherent in the woman trapped in a man's body and his/her problems encountered by family, friends, society and love itself. The sceptical sister, the in-calcitrant father, the first male love are all true-to-life ingredients to be found in I WANT WHAT I WANT. The reactions to these portrayals are vivid and real. The father, who lashes out to destroy his son upon learning of the secret life. The liberal sister who isn't quite so liberal when it comes to having one in the family. And the man who falls in love with Wendy. The moment of truth for him is both brutal and horrifying. It is certainly not a scene for the weak-bellied.

One is particularly impressed by the fortitude in the character of Roy/Wendy. While certainly not the militant of today's standards, Miss Heywood still gives dignity to the character by not allowing the protagonist to go begging. As the title demands he "wants what she wants". Particularly amusing is the confrontation between the sister and Wendy in the picture's moment of truth.

Considerable transvestite-transsexual research is evident in the remarkable 'feel' of the performances and the motion picture itself.

This is a pretty good movie. Unfortunately that's the most that can be said for it, that it's pretty good.

The idea is different and clever. A female movie star is discovered, upon her death, to have been a man. The film shows, through flashbacks, how all this came about.

The acting throughout is competent, if not inspired, and Jeremy Stockwell manages the tricky task of being convincing as "Dinah East".

Technically the film is well handled with good photography and so on. The only exceptions to this generality are the sound in a couple of scenes and the fact that the film seems to slip out of its period (1940's) now and then, but one has the feeling that it is probably a function of the low budget rather than carelessness on the part of the people involved.

The main flaws with the film must be laid at the feet of the writer-director Gene Nash. Nash obviously has sympathy for the people he is dealing with, but here it gets in his way. He is so anxious that the characters ease and desire for expression of love. In spite of a year and a half of hormones, taken both orally and by injection, I was masturbating several times a day right up until my entry into the hospital for the long awaited stage two. There was absolutely no detectable lessening in pleasure from this little discussed pastime.

Wearing a baby blue cotton dress with matching color suitcase in hand I ventured forth on the next stage of my journey from baggy-pants tedium to nylon-caressing glossiness: to state it another way, I checked into the hospital.

For those who are not familiar with trans sexual surgery, it should be pointed out that the operation is often carried out in two stages: the castration and the vaginal-labia construction. (It should also be stated that you are reading an article written by someone who is not an authority in this field. The book by Dr. Harry Benjamin or the book from Johns Hopkins Press should be consulted for greater and more accurate detail.) In the second operation, the penis is skinned, the interior is discarded, a cavity is made within the body, and the skin of the penis is used to line the cavity. As previously stated, the skin of the penis is used to simulate (yes, simulate, not create) the labia. The urinary tract is re-routed to emerge above the new vagina, where, if memory serves me, it belongs.

Pain? Yes, of course. It depends on your threshold and your attitude. It's there in the hospital and at home, but since we all will experience these things differently, let me say that anyone who goes through it will more likely speak of the damned big discomfort experienced, and then laugh in the same way she did while having it.

For many months after the operation it is necessary to wear a prosthetic form (dilator) in the vagina. Like any unnatural incision in the body, it will close up if it is not kept open. The form is approximately the size and shape of the penis. My own form is about six and a half inches long. It must be lubricated before insertion. (I find it difficult to walk the length of my apartment without stumbling over the cap from a flattened tube of K-Y.)

The instructions from my doctor were to wear it as much as possible: I wore it twenty-three hours a day. After about six months he told me to use it for about twenty minutes three times a day. This reduction in time was a relief. The dilator was not painful or uncomfortable in place, but squatting or sitting would sometime push it from its proper location out into the less deep portion of the vagina, and it would be necessary to go to the ladies' room to insert it more deeply. (Can't do without those sphincters, but they do push!)

The possibility exists that some reader out there might be wondering about intercourse. Yes, I have, and yes, I enjoyed it. No, I did not have an orgasm. What I enjoyed was finally fulfilling the role that I felt was natural to me. I did not expect an orgasm, nor do I expect one soon, and I realize that I may never experience one again. This is not a happy circumstance, but so be it. It certainly would be unrealistic to expect one in one's first encounters, when the fear of adequacy, the fear of not passing, the tension of a final culmination are all working against the natural release of tension. One may wonder if a born woman could have an orgasm with such tensions. This writer doubts it.

I regret that no picture accompanies this article. It is my intention to fade into the outside world without fanfare or Bronx cheers. The fem name used here is not my own. My hair is long, my breasts are full, I long for affection, and I do not seek any status as spokes-woman for sexual change. I seek the new ends that I have been striving for: a man, a quiet life, and a future with love.

I WANT

One can safely say, "I WANT WHAT I WANT" is more of a clinical observation of a transvestite/transsexual than an entertainment. It is a motion picture more likely to be discussed and analyzed rather than enjoyed. However, let me quickly add, it does succeed on both levels.

are not overplayed that they all wind up being underplayed. He is so anxious that we not laugh 'at' the characters that he mutes the natural humor of the situation to the point where it practically fades away.

Perhaps the greatest fault is that Nash does not let us get close enough to the character of the boy who becomes "Dinah East" so that we get his perspective on the unique events he goes through and his feelings about them.

The end result is something not objective enough to be comedy but not subjective enough to be drama of character, and, since it fails to quite succeed on either level it misses being truly entertaining as well. Everything is so mannered and carefully considered and tasteful in this picture (despite its 'X' rating) that the end result is rather like a banquet, all the courses of which taste like Cream of Wheat.

When Gene Nash learns that we can laugh heartily at the things people do yet still feel fondness and compassion for them or can see their sorrows and not be embarrassed then he can take the idea of DINAH EAST and make a movie that will really be something to see.

In less than two years QLF has met exactly one half of its goals, which is more than most organizations can claim fame for. Soon QLF will attack the antiquated loitering statutes used to harass the cross-dresser. We hope to get the law interpreted to be similar to the Hawaiian precedent. THEN attack again on the grounds that it is unconstitutional and similar to Nazi Germany's tactics when they forced the German Jews to wear the STAR OF DAVID.

Queens Liberation is not a radical group of people. The only radical element is the fact that all want to be able to wear the clothing they choose without being classed as criminals. They feel that it is their constitutional right..... and if demanding that right is radical, then they're radical! The only time QLF gets involved in politics is when it concerns the cross-dresser or homosexual.

in drag he had never cared too much for himself. However, when he saw Judy before him he became the happiest person in the world.

So far, most of the transvestites that come to my house for this service are nervous and surprisingly younger than what I had expected. I do prefer those that have never been in full make-up and costume as their expressions are so rewarding that I almost hate to take the $20 service fee. However, business is business and the fee is about half the price others charge for similar services. But where could one go and have the complete wardrobe, makeup, and hair supplied for that price? We don't put a time limit on the 'students' unless we have another appointment. We also supply several different changes of wigs and clothing and can have a hairdresser on the premises to have the individuals hair done for an additional $7.

We happened to just tease Judy's hair a little and he then preferred his own hair to a wig. He had intended to have the hair cut before coming over but decided not to for some reason or other. He is happy that he didn't as he'll never have to purchase a wig now!

The blond beauty sitting down is named Donna. We were asked to obtain a hairdresser for her and again another person was amazed by the transformation. Donna, too is in drag for the first time. After showing him Judy's pictures and telling him the story about Judy's reaction he said, "Well, I'll tell you one thing, I'm prettier than the girl (GG) I was out with last night."

The pretty brunette prefers that we don't use her name. She too was one of our prize students. Many, many others have come by but prefer that we not publish their pictures. Since we respect their privacy we are sorry to say that we cannot share with you their beauty and thoughts.

Happy dragging,

..... Lee G. Brewster
